Keep Calm and Verify It's Right

How to Use the Auditor Role to Get It Right

Hospitals employ or contract for defense auditors. These auditors often are coders or clinical staff who defend denials from third-party payers. Should that be the limit of your expectations? It's time to move this function into a resource providing opportunities to enhance net collections.

Learning Objectives:

- Understanding the role of the defense auditors
- Ensuring that the defense auditors understand all the opportunities for improvements
- how to move the defense auditor role from a pure expense to an investment

Keep Calm and Ensure It's Right

It's Not Enough to Code It Right; Ensuring Services Are Medically Necessary

While producing a clean claim is often the key to getting payment, there are an increasing number of audits by governmental and commercial payers to ensure that the billed service was medically necessary. In this talk, Dr. Hirsch will discuss medical necessity and the steps needed to prevent medical necessity denials including an overview of the growing area of clinical validation denials.

Learning Objectives:

- Understand payer guidelines for medical necessity
- Demonstrate common medical necessity denials
- Develop denial avoidance strategies for medical necessity
